Accompanying Statement

Tata Communications (America) Inc. ("TC America") is primarily an international carrier serving other carriers, Internet service providers and large enterprise customers. TC America typically transports the "middle" segment only of circuit-switched voice or Voice over Internet Protocol ("VoIP") international calls. TC America interconnects with U.S. interexchange carriers at the carrier hotel level (above the access tandem level) where traffic is handed off to TC America by its carrier customers, and then TC America transports that traffic to another interexchange carrier, usually overseas, for ultimate termination. TC America also transports traffic, handed off to TC America overseas by foreign carriers, into the U.S. Once the traffic is in the U.S., TC America hands off the traffic to a U.S. interexchange carrier (typically a U.S. carrier that, unlike TC America, is interconnected with local exchange carriers) for termination. TC America also provides a wide range of international information and voice and data telecommunications services to enterprise customers by means of direct access arrangements connecting such customers with TC America's network. TC America also offered for part of 2013 an international calling card service to end-user customers, which represented a fraction of one percent of TC America's total revenue. TC terminated its calling card service offering in late in 2013, and no longer markets this service.

TC America never uses CPNI in outbound marketing campaigns. Typically, new customers come to TC America, shopping for the best price for their international voice termination requirements. TC America first signs a nondisclosure agreement with the prospective carrier-customer and then markets to them using our price list for traffic termination destinations served. Any enterprise or wholesale voice transport carrier prospects that TC America contacts (i.e., that do not contact us first) are identified through public sources such as industry magazines. The only instance in which TC America may initiate contact with the customer using CPNI is for billing, maintenance and repair purposes, and to inquire about the customer's satisfaction with its existing services. Since TC America never uses CPNI in outbound marketing campaigns, it does not collect opt-in authorizations from customers for such use.

Furthermore, TC America does not share, sell, lease or otherwise provide CPNI to any of its affiliates, suppliers, vendors or any other third parties for the purposes of marketing any services. The provision of CPNI to any unrelated third party is strictly prohibited except for billing purposes, for the provision, maintenance and repair of services, to protect rights or property of TC America, or pursuant to legal process.

TC America is committed to protecting the confidentiality of all customer information, including CPNI. TC America has implemented password protection for customer access to account information. TC America's individual customer contracts contain confidentiality requirements regarding the treatment of customer account information, including CPNI, and TC America employees are prohibited from disclosing such information. All TC America personnel have certified in writing that they have read and will adhere to the Code of Conduct ("Code"), which contains strict confidentiality requirements for all customer confidential information, including CPNI, and provides for disciplinary action for violation up to, and including, immediate termination of employment. In fact, as part of an overall program of legal compliance training for TC America employees, TC America has instituted a web-based training program that instructs employees on a variety of legal compliance matters, including training related to the Code. Additionally, at the time of hiring, all new personnel must sign an agreement on Confidential Information, Intellectual Property and Exclusivity Undertakings, which includes confidentiality requirements such as maintaining the confidentiality of customer information. TC America personnel who are authorized to access CPNI are trained in the authorized uses of this information.

TC America is prepared to comply with applicable breach notification laws in the event of a CPNI breach.
